Associations Renewed
By Group of Club
Members

Renewing associations after a three months' lapse in their semi-monthly sessions, members of the Stitch and Chatter club met on Thursday afternoon as guests of Mrs. John Wesley Hancock in her home 1101 North Ross street.

A clever feature had been planned for roll call, for at this time each member responded by naming the official flower of her native state. During the business session in charge of the new president, Mrs. W. W. Adamson, club year books were distributed.

The group spent much of the afternoon sewing. As a special diversion, an enjoyable game, "A Sheaf of Pens," was played.

In concluding her hospitality, Mrs. Hancock served glorified rice with ice tea and vanilla wafers, using dahlias and zinnias in tints of yellow and rose for decoration.

Those present were Mesdames W. W. Adamson, Harold Bishop, Ralph Crane, John W. Hancock, J. H. House, E. J. Nalsh, Starr Ozment, Walter Ozment, Mary Rogers, Charles Ryan, Allie Ward, J. F. Weekly, Miss Miriam Adamson and little Edna Faith Ozment.

The next meeting will be held in two weeks' time, with Mrs. Hattie Wall as hostess in her home, 417 West Pine street.

Auxiliary President
Names Committee

Presiding over the first meeting of the American Legion auxiliary since she was installed as president at the recent county installation held in Huntington Beach, Mrs. Margaret Hill Thursday night appointed committee chairmen to serve during the year.

The meeting was held in Legion hall, with a chicken dinner preceding the business session. A feature of the evening was the presentation of a past president's pin to Mrs. E. F. Mathews, retiring president.

Committee chairmen named were Miss Julia Magill, Americanization; Mrs. Fannie Reeves, child welfare; Mrs. Arthur Eklund, hospitalization; Mrs. E. F. Mathews, publicity; Mrs. George Sullivan, ways and means; Mrs. John Turtop, membership; Mrs. Grover Fultz, entertainment; Mrs. Harry Pickard, table, and Mrs. David Jellis, house committee.

Guests at the affair were Miss Minnie Besser, president of the Veterans of Foreign Wars auxiliary, and Mrs. Charles Letmer, president of the Orange county 40 and 8.

Committee reports for the year were given.

Economics Group Has
Program on Milk
Products

A worthwhile program on "Milk and Milk Products," with Ralph Raitt as the speaker, was given Thursday afternoon at the meeting of the Third Household Economics section of Ebells society, held in the clubhouse. Mesdames W. S. Roe, E. H. Prince and J. B. Stewart were hostesses for the afternoon.

In his talk, Mr. Raitt cited interesting facts from the book, "Diet and Weight Control," written by Dr. Shirley Winn, health commissioner of New York city.

The hostesses used colorful zinnias and asters in decorating the clubhouse for the enjoyable afternoon.

Those present were Mesdames F. L. Andrews, B. B. Kellogg, F. M. Robinson, W. B. Risk, J. H. Walker, C. W. Ralston, C. F. Bennett, E. T. Preble, W. L. Leiby, George Dodson, E. L. Robinson, Charles Seamans, Stella Menges, D. F. Cook, A. G. Finley, A. N. Cox and E. T. Battey.

Mrs. Cox is the new leader of the section.

New Baby Son Inspires
Hospitality of His Mother's Friends

While tiny James Paul may have been oblivious to any social happenings of the past week, the fact remains that his recent arrival to gladden the home of Dr. and Mrs. Cassius E. Paul, 303 Wright street, inspired a most delightful affair of Wednesday when members of a dessert bridge club, made their meeting in the Orlyn Robertson home, an occasion to shower Mrs. Paul with many exquisite gifts for her tiny new son.

Mrs. Robertson and Mrs. W. H. Wright were co-hostesses on entertaining the club, and extended their plans to include a few of Mrs. Paul's closest friends, meanwhile carefully keeping their show-er plans a secret from their honoree.

Mrs. Robertson's pretty home at 2325 Riverside drive, was rendezvous for the guests, who found tables in readiness for the dainty dessert course served to usher in the afternoon's pleasures.

Each table bore its bowl of pink pompon dahlias, as the larger and more brilliantly colored varieties were reserved for the general decoration of the home. Mrs. Paul speedily discovered that her small son had inspired the refreshment course, for ice cream was moulded in the forms of dignified storks each bearing its infantile gift. Individual cakes had pink rosebuds in their white frosting, so the dainty color scheme was carefully maintained.

It was immediately after the serving of the dessert course that the chief surprise of the afternoon was introduced with the entry of little Miss Mary Jane Robertson, small daughter of the home. She was a charming picture in her ruffled taffeta frock of pale blue, and wheeling her doll carriage with its fluted pink crepe paper frills and its burden of daintily wrapped packages, all chosen for Mrs. Paul and her infant son.

Bridge games following this interesting interval, were especially profitable for Mrs. J. E. Paul and Mrs. Richard Garstang, whose high scoring was rewarded with handsome card table covers of heavy silk, rubber lined.

Asked to share the afternoon with the hostesses and their honoree, Mrs. Cassius Paul, were Mesdames Fred Newcomb, Jr., E. W. Sprunne, Harry Westover, G. K. Stovel, Jack Fisher, Loyal King, Robert Mize, Clarence Nisson and L. Allen Wallace of Glendale of the bridge club personnel, and the additional close friends of Mrs. Paul, Mrs. J. E. Paul, Mrs. Jack Colburn, Mrs. Gene Hays, Mrs. Ridley Smith, Mrs. Richard Garstang, Mrs. Arvid Hellburg, Mrs. E. Nell Stanley, Mrs. Robert Alexander, Mrs. Milburn Harvey and Mrs. Theodore Bolte.

County Nurses Attend
Long Beach Session

Spending an interesting evening in Long Beach, Orange county nurses were the guests Thursday of the Nurses' association of that city who entertained at dinner in the Y. W. clubrooms of Long Beach, with student nurses of Seaside hospital serving.

There were several special guests including Mrs. Harriet Flemming, president of the State Nurses' association; Miss Anna C. Jamme, editor of the Pacific Coast Journal of Nursing, and Father Lucy of St. Anthony's school, president of the Western Hospital board.

Each gave an interesting talk. Mrs. Flemming presenting the idea of a community council to aid in the distribution of nursing service; Miss Lammé discussing what she termed the "Blessed Depression," because the pressure of the times had razed walls erected by different groups, and bound everyone together more closely in community service; and Father Lucy on nursing economics. He declared that the supply of nurses should not be reduced but that new fields for nursing service should be opened and an eight-hour day established for all members of the profession.

MRS. ELMER FOWLER
A home at 905 South Gurney street awaits the early return of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer I. Fowler from the honeymoon travels through the northern part of the state, which they have been enjoying since their marriage just a week ago. For it was on Saturday, October 1, that Miss Esther Scriven, daughter of the Gilbert J. Scrivens of Orange, and Elmer I. Fowler, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Fowler of this city, were wedded by the Rev. L. V. Lucas, pastor of the Orange First M. E. church.

The pretty bride has found herself the center of various happy groups called together for parties in her honor, but no social affair has had more charm than the quietly simple wedding and the smart reception which followed it and was held in the Doris Kathryn Tea Shoppe on North Main street of this city. The nuptials took place in the parsonage home of the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Lucas, whose interest in the event was expressed in the flowers arranged so beautifully as a background for the rite.

MRS. JOHN MAXWELL
When Miss Nell Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Fielding Lewis, North Glassell avenue, Orange, became the bride of John D. Maxwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson D. Maxwell of Los Angeles, it was at a late afternoon ceremony held in mid-September in the Wee Kirk o' the Heather, Glendale.

Dr. James Hamilton Laeh of Hollywood Congregational church, read the nuptial service, which was attended by scores of close friends of the young people. The pageantry of the bridal grouping was quite lovely, the bride's several attendants wearing smart frocks in fuchsia shades, especially effective for an autumn wedding when combined with the vivid flowers decorating the romantic little kirk. Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell spent their honeymoon in motoring through northern California, returning for a short visit in the bride's girlhood home in Orange, before seeking the new home awaiting them in Los Angeles. Both are graduates of University of California at Los Angeles, where Mrs. Maxwell was a member of Kappa Delta sorority while Mr. Maxwell belonged to Theta Xi fraternity.

MRS. LESLIE THOMAS
Having spent so much time in northern Orange county communities during the past few years, Mrs. Leslie Thomas has a world of friends there to express a warm personal interest in her marriage. She was formerly Miss Harriett Vilas, daughter of Mrs. Blanche Vilas of Canoga Park. She attended Fullerton junior college, making her home with her cousins, the Horace Blairs. Since graduation she has served as office nurse to Dr. V. L. Morris of La Habra, and lived with her uncle and aunt, Councilman and Mrs. H. A. Randall of that city. The marriage of Miss Vilas and

Santa Ana to Return
With Iowa Bride

The return to Santa Ana later in the autumn of Disbury Wheeler, 1127 West Pine street, and his bride, formerly Miss Oda Magill of Audubon, Iowa, is being awaited with much interest by Wheeler's many friends in this community, especially in the congregations of Santa Ana Church of Christ, and Orange Church of Christ, where he has served as part time pastor.

It was on Monday, September 21, in Omaha, Neb., that the marriage of Mrs. Magill and Mr. Wheeler took place, and after a few days spent in Omaha, the couple returned to Audubon, where they will spend a month or six weeks before coming to the Southland. Their return to Audubon where the bride had lived the greater part of her life, was the occasion of several pleasant affairs.

Mr. Wheeler whose vocation is that of a carpenter, follows in his father's footsteps in his ministerial work, for his father, the late James R. Wheeler, was for many years, pastor of the Liberty Christian church in his little home city in Iowa.

Rancher to Make Home In This City
Newcomers to the city are Mr. and Mrs. Alfred C. Ey who recently arrived from Sonoma county where they lived on a large ranch, to take up their residence in a North Broadway apartment.

Alfred C. Ey is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ey, prominent in civic and social circles of this city over a long period of years. Prior to his ranching activities, the young man lived in Palo Alto and was sports editor of the Palo Alto Times. His bride (for the young people have been married only three months) was from San Francisco and graduated from University of California where she was president of Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

Girl Reserves Promise
Special Features at Musical Tea

Just a week from today, on Saturday, October 15, members of the Senior High School Girl Reserves are hoping to entertain a large group of guests at a musical tea which they are to give in the Y. W. clubrooms, beginning at 3 o'clock.

Saturday afternoon was selected for this event for various reasons, first and foremost, of course being the fact that the young hostesses themselves find that their sole afternoon of freedom during the school year. Their idea in presenting this tea at this time, was to form the nucleus for a fund to send more delegates to the Girl Reserve conference at Asilomar next summer. The value of these conferences has been proven so conclusively to the members of the local organization that they hope to amass funds sufficient to send a number of members rather than the two or three who have been able to attend in the past summers.

Well known musicians of the city are showing their warm personal interest in such a plan, and are giving of their talents to assist the Girl Reserves, thus insuring a program that promises to be one of the most pleasant musical events of the autumn. Olline Enlow Matthews, violinist; Ione Tunison Peek, pianist, and Cesare D. Clafont, trombonist, all of this city, will play; Madame Manuela V. Budrow-Rafferty will come down from Los Angeles especially that she may add song groups to the program. Miss Carolyn Haughton will talk on "The Relation of Music to Life," and Eleanor Young Elliott will add a monologue to the program.

Miss Beulah Purkey, chairman of the finance committee of the Girl Reserves, has had the cooperation of Miss Haughton in all plans for the party, as well as that of Miss E. Lucille Robinson, Girl Reserve secretary of the Y. W. C. A. The three, with the other committee members, have worked out a table plan whereby the guests will mingle in unusual informality and friendship, and this coupled with homelike charm of the big assembly room of the Y. W., promises to give all the intimacy and distinction that would be apparent in some spacious home.

Tables may be reserved by telephoning the Y. W. office or may be purchased through any member of the Girl Reserve club. The invitation to attend is a general one, and everyone will be assured of a welcome.

So much interest is being manifested already in the event that the young women who will entertain so charmingly feel that the date is surrounded with a special luster all its own, and that it will mark one of their greatest successes in entertaining.

Luncheon and Program Feature Meeting of Kiowa Club

An entertaining program of dancing and readings held the attention of Kiowa club members meeting in the home of Mrs. Glenn Wells, South Parton street, Thursday. The entertainment followed a luncheon served at tables which bore as adornment roses, sent from the Ray Lambert home. Mrs. George Wells Jr. assisted in receiving. Aiding with the luncheon service were Mrs. G. W. Wells and Mrs. Ray Lambert.

Readings by Mrs. Edward Abbott of Glendale and Mrs. Gertrude Copeland of Long Beach were the first numbers heard, with dances following by little Caroline Wells, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Wells, Jr., who was accompanied by Mrs. Ray Lambert. Mrs. Edna Wells conducted a brief business meeting during which it was revealed that the November session would be held in Long Beach with Mrs. T. P. Wilson and Mrs. Robert Burgess as hostesses.

Members and guests in attendance Thursday were Mesdames Glenn Wells and George Wells, Jr., hostesses; Ray Lambert, Jeffreys, George Nay; Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Wells, the Misses Barbara and Lucille Lambert, Caroline Wells and Ida Nay, all of Santa Ana; Mesdames Gertrude Copeland, U. S. Landis, T. P. Wilson, Robert Burgess and Master Billy Burgess, all of Long Beach; Mesdames Edna Wells, Costa Mesa; Edward Abbott and Willa Wells, Glendale; May Matthews and Fenlon Matthews, Tustin; W. D. Moriarty, H. E. Glenn and Don Glenn, all of Los Angeles.

College Social Life
Enlivened by Two
Happy Affairs

Two more anticipated events have been marked from the Jaycee social calendar since Thursday night when L'Hotel de Rambouillet and the Buccaneers each held noteworthy sessions.

French Club Dinner

It was in the secluded garden of Miss Lella Watson's home at 1840 West Eighth street, that members of Junior College French club, L'Hotel de Rambouillet, foregathered Thursday evening for the first of what promises to be an unusually interesting series of meetings during the semester.

Shrubbery and vines produced a privacy that was especially enjoyable at the dinner hour when juicy steaks were served after Miss Watson, had presided at their broiling over the outdoor grill. She was assisted in serving by Miss Joy McPhee and Miss Eileen Adams.

It was the privilege of the club members to entertain as special guests, Mrs. Earl T. Johnston and Madame Ollivier, each of whom addressed the group informally. Madame Ollivier as a native born Frenchwoman, and Mrs. Johnston as one whose childhood and girlhood schooldays all had been spent in Paris. Both talked exclusively in French, to the pronounced interest and benefit of the students. Mrs. Johnston had been taken from her native England to Paris when but five years old, and her experiences in the continental schools were extremely interesting to the young people. Madame Ollivier discussed France in general, its people and its customs.

Among the 30 or more club members present to share the hospitality of Miss Watson, head of the foreign language department of junior college, and enjoy the presence of Madame Ollivier and Mrs. Johnston, were Mrs. Constance Snelley, the Misses Ellen Snelley, Corinne Lecrivain, Irene Rose, Maxine Clark, Yasuko Sakai, Eleanor Rogers, Joy McPhee, Aileen Adams, Barbara Allen, Nadine Mason, Barbara Thompson, Ruth Jenkins, Mary Frances Dayton, Betty Hawk, and Bernice Bronson and the Messrs. Duncan Harnols, William Hawk, William Blanchard, Albert Spencer, Everett Stovall.

Buccaneers Entertain

Dinner amidst the pleasant surroundings of the S. H. Finley home, 1523 East Fourth street, was the manner in which Buccaneers complimented their rushes, with Rhodes Finley greeting members and guests at the dinner hour. Following the serving of the menu, bridge was introduced for the evening's diversion.

Rushes present were Stanley Essert, Walter Meyer, Harold Post, Glen Lee, John Wells, Wendel Kanoyer, Paul Hansen, Clayton McKeeth, Clarence Lewis, Jack Wright, Jimmy Lash, Earl Motley, Tom Kistinger, Guy LaValle and George Lake. Hosts were Rhodes Finley, Dean Hyatt, Jimmy Hithcock, Harold Dittmore, Bill Kistinger, Bill Beeman, Dick Haffern, Russell Koons, Kenneth Eastman, Adam Lehr and Larry Ridenour.

Former J. C. Student
To Be Wedded Soon

That Hendrik VanRensselaer, prominent in campus, sports and scholastic events during his course at Santa Ana junior college, was to be wedded this month in the east, was the interesting news conveyed to friends of the young man in this city.

Mr. VanRensselaer's fiancée is Miss Serena W. Miles of Woodmere, Long Island, N. Y., and the marriage will take place in the home of her parents on Long Island, on Tuesday, October 25. Following the marriage, the young people will make their home in Lake George, N. Y. It was in 1925-27 that Mr. VanRensselaer attended the local junior college.

Tea and Musicales Marks
32nd Anniversary of
Ebell Section

Highlights in the career of 32 years claimed by the Music, Art and Drama section of Ebells society and signaled by the present members of that group at a tea musicale yesterday were sketched by Mrs. Mit Phillips as a program feature of the observance. Mrs. Phillips was a charter member of the section and is the only remaining member of the original Music, Art and Drama roster. The section was invited to the residence of Mrs. Holmes Bishop on Fairhaven avenue for the anniversary party.

A musical program of delightful character had been arranged, with Mrs. Oliver Goodwin charming with two groups of soprano solos, accompanied by Miss Ruth Armstrong, and Miss J. Neppine Madrid, a pupil of Earl Fraser, winning her audience with three piano selections. Mrs. W. B. Snow, in charge of program arrangements, presided during the entertainment interval.

It fell to Mrs. Phillips' lot to present the birthday cake when guests were invited to the dining room for tea. Mrs. Clarence Gustlin was accorded the honor of cutting the cake, which was passed with tea, poured by Mrs. Theo. A. Winbiger and Mrs. Mit Phillips. Assisting Mrs. Bishop with various hostesses were Mrs. Miss. Preble Drake, hostess chairman; Mrs. Theo. A. Winbiger and Mrs. Maude Perkins. Approximately 40 members and guests shared the hospitality.

Of the business interval preceding the program Mrs. Charles C. Brisco assumed charge in the absence of Mrs. C. F. Smith, section leader. Members learned that Evelyn Nunn Miller of Los Angeles would appear before the section under the sponsorship of Miss Beulah May on Friday, November 4, with an address on the progress being made in Los Angeles along art lines.

Mrs. T. R. Trawick was elected secretary to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Mrs. P. H. Cloyce. Mrs. Trawick's name was proposed by a nominating committee of which Mrs. Alice Hill Hatch was chairman.

Happy Hours Club
Has Luncheon

Members of the Happy Hours club were pleasantly entertained Thursday afternoon when they were guests in the home of Mrs. P. L. Tople, 330 West Washington avenue. At 12:30 o'clock a delicious luncheon was served, with asters providing floral decorations.

Those present were Mesdames Nellie Young, Jean Tremble, Maude Swarthout, Frances Goeper, Nell Thatcher, Ella Spencer, C. W. Houghtaling and the hostess, Mrs. Tople. Mrs. Tremble won the award for scoring high in the card games of the afternoon, while Mrs. Houghtaling won the guest prize. Mrs. Nellie Young will be hostess at the next meeting, Thursday, November 3.

Little Maid's Birthday
Occasions Party

The eleventh birthday of little Miss Ruth Smith was made a very happy occasion this week, when she was honor guest at a party given by her aunt, Mrs. C. D. Hicks in the Hicks home, 1222 South Broadway.

Four Sunday school classmates of the young girl guests were invited to share the party which began when school was over in the afternoon and continued until 7:30 o'clock, with games of various kinds for entertainment. Just before the children took their departure, Mrs. Hicks served a daintily arranged little supper.

Miss Ruth's young friends who shared her birthday anniversary with her were Wynette Todd, Margie Buck, Irene Marshall and Virginia Valentine.

Royal Arch Chapter
Opens Meetings

The first pot luck dinner to be held following the vacation interval by Royal Arch Chapter No. 72 of the Masonic Order and given Thursday evening in the Masonic temple proved a delightful affair. A committee headed by Mrs. J. E. Cowen and including Mesdames G. Goodwin, W. E. Hennion and Robert White had arranged tables with green and autumn colored leaves, these being scattered down the table's center, with yellow candles and bouquets of yellow flowers added to accentuate the color scheme.

Hot dishes were placed upon a long table from which members and guests were invited to help themselves.

Following a pleasant dinner hour, the men in the party adjourned to the lodge rooms for their stated meeting while the women indulged in bridge in the lounge, where tables were found in readiness. The ensuing hour of play was in charge of Mrs. J. H. Shaw.

Card awards went to Mrs. Frank Hoffman, Mrs. J. P. Smith and Mrs. E. MacVicker Smith, first, second and low scores.

The lodge will hold its next pot luck dinner Thursday, November 2.

To Bride-elect of October

Disclosure of Miss Elizabeth M. Hoffman's plans for a late October wedding led to the hospitality extended one evening this week by Mrs. James C. Armstrong and her mother, Mrs. Pollins. Miss Hoffman, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Hoffman of 1035 West Sixth street, will wed George Sackman, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Sackman, 1027 West Sixth street.

Invitations characterized the party as a miscellaneous shower, and gifts brought for Miss Hoffman to comply with the hostesses' request, were placed before the honoree in a beautifully decorated basket, carried in by Peter and Anlo Armstrong, son and daughter of one of the hostesses. Anagrams and other games were introduced as diversions, the two prizes reserved for winners both going to Miss Grace McHarg.

Molded fruit salad, fancy cookies and coffee were served on individual trays to guests gathered to compliment Miss Hoffman, those present in addition to the honoree, including Mesdames O. M. Hoffman, J. W. Sackman, Virgil Reed, Barker Woodward, Root, the Misses Gertrude Hoffman, Marie Raab, Grace Wurster, and young Peter and Anlo Armstrong, all of Santa Ana; Miss Juliette Blaylock, of Huntington Beach; Miss Grace McHarg, of St. Paul, Minn., and the hostesses, Mrs. Armstrong and Mrs. Pollins.

Telephone Belles Join
In Merry Measures
Of Benefit Dance

Some 200 or more guests enjoyed the informal dance given on Thursday night in Pythian hall by the local telephone company as a benefit for the Martha Grafflin fund maintained by company employees to loan to girls of the company in emergency need of financial assistance.

Miss Ruth Cathart, Miss Audrey Steele, Mrs. James Underwood and Edward Welder formed the committee arranging details of the party, and were congratulated upon the success of their plans. These involved many special dances, particularly a ballroom number when the bright colored bangles floated through the air some of them containing numbers which entitled their captors to pretty prizes donated by interested local merchants.

The lively dance music was furnished by Jack Ewing's "Mail Order Company Orchestra," the official musical group of the telephone company.

Guests were greeted by hosts and hostesses who arranged that there should be no strangers among the 200 or more dancers. In this friendly group were Miss Cathart, Mrs. Steele, Mrs. Underwood and Mr. Welder of the general committee, Miss Alma Drischel, Mrs. Alpha Wright and Fred Anderson.

Filling the Cookie Jar
Next to the presidential elections the filling of cookie jars throughout the land is of most importance—probably first and only in the eyes of the children.

A "Sweet" for the active growing child is a paramount necessity; the rapid growth of the child and the demands made by play on his energy are met largely by sugar. An intensive energy making food, in which the sugar content is mixed with tissue making foods to the best advantage.

Try these easily made little cakes this week:

Chocolate Brownies
1/2 cup butter
1 cup white sugar
2 squares melted chocolate
2 eggs, well beaten
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup walnuts
1/2 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1 egg, dissolved in
1 tablespoon hot water
1 teaspoon vanilla
Cream the butter and sugar, add beaten eggs and whip well, then the chocolate, shaved and melted over hot water. Whip briskly to mix, add the dissolved baking powder and vanilla, then the flour and chopped nuts.

Drop by small teaspoonfuls on oiled baking sheets and bake in a slow oven about 15 minutes. If wished the entire amount can be very thinly smoothed into a large pan and baked in a very slow oven 25 minutes. When done, cut in strips, roll in sugar and store away.

TODAY'S RECIPE
Graham Cracker Pudding
1/2 pound marshmallows
1/2 cup thin cream
1/2 pound pitted dates
20 graham crackers, rolled fine
1/2 cup chopped walnuts
Heat the cream, just enough to start the marshmallows melting. The marshmallows must be cut in pieces before putting them into the cream to mix the cracker paste to is set in a cool place to chill.
Pit the dates and cut in thin strips, chop the walnuts, roll the crackers. Combine all three, add a pinch of salt for good measure, and use the marshmallow cream to mix the cracker paste to a stiff sort of dough. Pat it down into a small pan, lined with waxed paper, and let the roll chill all day or overnight. If it is to be used for next day's luncheon.
Cut, when ready to serve, in thin slices, put a spoonful of whipped cream on each slice and top it with a cherry.

Whipped cream on this rich dessert seems to me out of line. The dessert is quite good enough without cream, but if you have a yen for decoration I would suggest covering each slice as cut with meringue. Slip it under a quick flame and brown it before serving... sort of baked Alaska effect, y' see.

There are nearly 3500 calories in the dessert, minus whipped cream or cherry. The portions should run to not less than 10, but even that when invested in these rich energy type calories makes quite a sizeable pile. I think I'd forget about the whipped cream if I were in your place—the family won't mind.

A. C. Motrys, Married
In Iowa, Solemnize
50th Anniversary

Born and reared in Ionia, Iowa, near Mason City, within nine miles of the "Little Brown Church" where they were later married, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Motrys of 1619 Palm street yesterday celebrated the 50th anniversary of their wedding date.

Relatives, neighbors and other friends joined with the Motrys in their recognition of the golden wedding anniversary, dropping in as a group last evening to add to the accumulation of flowers and other anniversary remembrances already received by the elderly couple.

Tomorrow the observance will find a continuation in the luncheon planned for noon, when only members of the immediate family will be present to confer good wishes. Tomorrow's luncheon table will be set for Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Motrys, hosts and guests of honor; Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Motrys, Mrs. Leona Motrys, Mr. and Mrs. N. Kilby and Mrs. Anna White.

The A. C. Motrys, who have been Santa Ana residents for ten years, since arriving from Iowa, have one son, V. L. Motrys, who resides at 709 Highland street, and a granddaughter, Leona Motrys, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Motrys. Both of the elder Motrys enjoy active affiliation with the First Methodist Episcopal church of this city.

Public Card Event

Pythian Sisters welcomed a large gathering Wednesday night when they served as hostesses at a public card affair held in M. W. A. hall under the auspices of their organization.

Goldenrod massed in baskets about the hall provided striking decoration, and card tables were arranged in this pleasant setting.

The several prizes which committee members had procured for the occasion were apportioned to Mrs. Minnie Rowe, Mrs. Dorothy Bell and Mrs. J. H. Patison, first, second and low among women players; and Louis Bittle and C. H. Powers, who took first and consolation prizes, respectively, among the men. To Mrs. Margaret Hunt went a door prize.

A special guest was Miss Nell Hunt of Oklahoma, past grand chief of the Pythian Sisters of that state and a sister of Mrs. G. M. Traile of this city.

Refreshments of coffee and cake were enjoyed by guests when the card play had ended, this and other party details being superintended by Mrs. Edward W. Cochems, Fannie Cunningham and H. A. Springer.

Church Societies

Return From Conference

Delegates from the First Congregational church of Santa Ana attending the Pacific Slope Congregational conference at San Diego this week took an active part in the proceedings, according to reports brought back today by Mrs. John A. Tessmann of this city delivered an address on "The World We Live In," and Mrs. Perry F. Schrock, another delegate, presided at a luncheon seminar Thursday conducted by Dr. Henry K. Booth of Long Beach.

Santa Ana delegates attending were the Rev. and Mrs. Perry F. Schrock, Mr. and Mrs. F. Nick, Dr. J. T. Drake and Mesdames C. F. Crose, Carrie H. Watson and Sallie P. Powell, other local church members present including Miss Marian Bruner and Miss Eleanor Crookshank, the Rev. W. S. McDougall, Messrs. Edward Riniker, John K. Colwell and C. S. Crookshank.

The conference, held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, drew delegates from Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and California, and consisted of addresses by outstanding members of the participating church bodies. Addresses and discussions revolved about the theme, "The New West and the New World." A special series of talks was given by Dr. George A. Buttrick, pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church in New York City and recognized as among the foremost preachers in the United States. Dr. Buttrick is delivering the 1932-33 Earle lectures at the Pacific School of Religion, at the University of California, Berkeley.

Basketball Party

The victory registered by the high school class of the United Brethren church of Santa Ana over a team representing the Third United Brethren church of Los Angeles in the first basketball game of the season made the recent party arranged by the girls' class of the local church an especially happy affair.

Players and onlookers repaired from the Y floor to the social room of the church following the game and found the party setting particularly attractive with its appointments arranged to represent a living room. Card tables erected about the room provided places for coddle players, while in the center of the room stood a pedestal on which were placed the silver trophies won last year by the Santa Ana team. Hot coffee and doughnuts were served from a booth at one end of the room decorated with green and white, the colors of the team, a scheme likewise apparent in other details. # MUSIC LITERATURE ART

NATIONAL COLLEGE SONG WEEK

BY RUTH ANDREWS

Some caustic critic of much-maligned modern youth has remarked that of all classes of people, the college student of today is less appreciative of music than any other person—also, more than that, that he is less concerned with the fostering of this foremost of the arts than almost any other type of individual whom one might name.

An excellent refutation of such a gloomy statement is to be found in an interesting new movement which has been under way throughout the nation recently which resulted in this past week, October 1-5, being chosen by leading representatives of various American colleges and universities as an appropriate time for the inauguration of National College Song Week, an event which will henceforth be celebrated annually by many thousands of college men and women in all parts of the nation.

The purpose back of this novel movement is the stimulating of a greater national interest in college music, and to that end a special effort has been put forth to unite all the college students and alumni scattered through various sections of the country. This ambitious undertaking is under the direction of a national executive committee, composed of prominent college men and women from educational institutions all over the United States, all of whom are actively interested in college music, with Thornton W. Allen of New York as executive chairman, and Archie M. Palmer, secretary of the Association of American Colleges, appointed as secretary.

During the week mass meetings and special student assemblies have been conducted at the various colleges and universities under the direction of local leaders in order to encourage familiarity with their own college songs among undergraduates. Over a million college men and women have been taking an active part in the effort to arouse a wider enthusiasm in college music, spurred on by the timely slogan, "Boost Your Own College Songs," which has been adopted.

If there is anything that is guaranteed to reawaken vivid memories of the beloved old Alma Mater within the heart of an alumnus more keenly than the vigorous strains of a rousing old college song, it has yet to be discovered. Keeping this truth in mind, various college clubs, aided by the national organization of college publicity managers, have also endeavored to enlist the aid of thousands of alumni in the new nationwide movement, that will certainly effect a more widespread interest in a type of music that abounds in local color, and that is redolent with the spirit of healthy, sport loving American youth.

With an admirable spirit of co-operation, prominent broadcasting companies and major national advertising concerns, as well as some of the nation's leading orchestra and band directors, have featured special college music on their programs during this National College Song Week, and have encouraged college men and women from educational institutions all over the United States, all of whom are actively interested in college music, with Thornton W. Allen of New York as executive chairman, and Archie M. Palmer, secretary of the Association of American Colleges, appointed as secretary.

POSS TO SING AT CLAREMONT ON WEDNESDAY

Lily Pons, world's great coloratura soprano, who has won universal admiration since her sensational debut with the Metropolitan Opera company last January, will be heard in person next Wednesday evening, October 12, in the opening concert of the Claremont Colleges Artist Course in Bridges auditorium.

Communities within range of Claremont are rarely fortunate in having this great artist, as she has been able to appear in less than a dozen concerts in the United States, and has come west for the opening of the new six million dollar opera house in San Francisco. Her season in New York City last spring made operatic history where the returns from the box office exceeded those of even Caruso.

Miss Pons is the most talked-of singer of the day, because of the uniqueness of her experience as well as her unsurpassed ability. Until four years ago, she had expected to be a concert pianist, and only recently took up the study of singing. Although only 24 years of age, scarcely more than five feet tall, and weighing less than 100 pounds, she has a quality of voice the fulness, maturity, and range of which are the inspiration of the musical world. Born of an Italian mother and a French father, she seems to combine the rare spirit and charm of both of these great peoples of Latin origin.

Although her program has not yet been announced, it is already assured that it will be concluded with the singing of the famous Bell song from "Lakme," for which she is known the world over.

Other events in the Artist Course at Claremont, include: Richard Bonelli; Escudero, Spanish dancer; the Vienna Choir Boys; the Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra, and Joseph Szegedi, Hungarian violinist.

BOOK REVIEWS

By MARY BURKE KING

"A New Deal" by Stuart Chase, published by The MacMillan company of New York.

"A New Deal" is a popular presentation of the economic ills of the world and the United States in particular. J. Maynard Keynes, Gustav Cassel, J. A. Hobson and A. H. Hansen, whom the author quotes from time to time, have presented similar views points but not in so clear a fashion.

The author asks the question: What is an economic system for? And he answers, "Its purpose is to provide shelter, clothes, comforts in dependable and adequate quantities." Then he proceeds to point out that we have the men and the factories and the raw materials plus the skill to make for ourselves all the things we desire.

Why don't we do so, he asks. In great part he blames the doctrine of "laissez-faire" and rank individualism. Under the driving force of greedy and aggressive individualism our economic system has run ashore.

In the midst of ages kings and princes squandered the earnings of their subjects on wars and social pleasures. The modern capitalists of industry have wrecked a system through uncontrolled saving. Every time the modern ruler had secured sufficient monies to do so, he built a new factory. Until at the present time we have more factories of every kind than we can use.

Each new factory that is built ruins in part the value of some other factory already built. The extension of factory space and buildings has been carried to such an extent in some lines of industry that none of the properties are able to make any money and for this reason are undesirable investments. The destruction of these values has taken place because the fruits of the industry were accumulated in the hands of a few who husbanded them carefully and created so many new factories that the value of all of them declined.

Mr. Chase believes in "soaking the rich." He would take huge incomes away from the rich so as to prevent them from over-investing in any line of business and in this way prevent them from over-producing. He points out that trade association, and in large industries big financial interests, already try to limit the amount of new capital that is invested in their industry; but not having the support of the government, these efforts are largely wasted. Some ambitious person or group of individuals is constantly expanding the factory capacity with the result that all are injured.

The author would regulate investments and in this way production, and the wastefulness of competition, which spends its last energy fighting competition instead of directing its talents to the production of better goods.

The remedy for the immediate crisis he says is inflation. Money is only a commodity like all other commodities, and as such it should be managed. The proper authorities should increase the amount of money when prices are too low and they should restrict the amount of money and increase the supply of goods when prices are too high.

The Burning Bush by Sigrid Undset published by Alfred A. Knopf.

"The Burning Bush" is a slow-moving deliberate book—unmistakably propaganda. It is a sequel to "The Wild Orchid," in which we saw that Paul Selmar was destined to become a member of the Catholic church. In this book he joins the church and the picture is of a man in a modern world buffeted by problems and unhappiness who finds solace in the church.

Paul Selmar in this story has many Bjorg. They have two children. Paul and Bjorg are not compatible. She is a shallow, selfish little thing who finally leaves him and the children, in an emotional upheaval which follows upon the death of their youngest child. For his sorrow he finds consolation in his religion. Like H. O. Sea he took his wife Bjorg back and the incident serves as does the prophet to show Paul as an individual sustained by his religion to act righteously.

Lucy, Paul's former fiancée and mistress, comes back into his life but their relationship is pure. He responding to her need of financial help and eventually jeopardizing himself in attempting to protect her from one who would prey upon her.

There is really charming portraiture of the two children of Paul and Bjorg, particularly "Sun-life," the oldest who is a little girl. One night Paul puts Sunny to bed and the business of getting her settled for the night will ring so true to parents that there will be no doubt of their appreciation.

The Mango Tree by Margaret Hamilton, published by The Century Co.

Right into the heart of a child we penetrate by means of "The Mango Tree." The tree is the retreat of a little girl who spent her childhood in South Africa, and who tells in the book of her experiences. Growups thought she was sulking and moody when she went to the Mango tree, but quite the contrary. That was her world, of her peopling, where she confided in "Mrs. Brooks," who was an imagined companion, understanding, helpful, comforting. Near by the mango tree, where Mrs. Brooks could always be found, lived Mrs. Snooks, but her tree was scraggly, and unfriendly people, gossip and hateful people congregated there.

"The Mango Tree" warms the heart. Everyone with a bit of imagination and a love of children will enjoy reading it.

The little girl does infinitely amusing things. She conducts a mock church service, much to the delight of the young men visitors who frequent the verandah of her father and mother's home. She will not permit them to be comfortable, for she said in church they must not be comfortable, they must sit up straight and take their feet down off the railing and she will not proceed with her sermon until they are sitting up properly. And they sit up, for even on a hot day it was worth the effort in order to hear the child.

There is pathos and humor and increased understanding of the child in the book. It warms the heart almost to the point of melting tears. Side by side with the picture of Tiny Tim will be placed that of the little child with her china cup held up for the Deacon who passed her by at Communion service.

And how she struggled to discover why some men can't stand the swish of a petticoat! And the sorrow of her first engagement she was only 11. The little boy had informed himself properly, and asked the consent of her father. Father, whom she calls "the soldier," was much amused and granted it. It seemed to seal her doom. It probably was a very funny episode to the adults, but in "The Mango Tree" we see it from the child's viewpoint.

Word comes from London that "Ballerina," Lady Eleanor Smith's novel of a glamorous dancer in the Second Empire, is to be done in England as a musical play with Monckton Hoffs lyrics and Fritz Kreisler music. Several American managers and composers were after the dramatic rights.

From Stockholm comes word that John Masfield, the British poet laureate, was mentioned the other day by the newspaper Tidsningen as a possible candidate for the Nobel Prize in Literature for 1932. The newspaper said, however, that it was likely that the prize would be divided between Paul Valery, the French poet and critic, and Stefan George, the German lyric poet.

LOUISE EVERETT

To whatever she does—whether painting on the mesas of Arizona, touring Spain in an old Ford, climbing the Candian Rockies or dancing in a Grecian pageant at the California Art Club—Louise Everett (Mrs. R. E. Nimmo) brings the color of her vibrant and lovable personality. She is well known to Orange county where her paintings with those of her equally talented mother are often seen on the walls of Laguna Beach art galleries. Perhaps not so many know that she also writes, both verse and travel articles.

RAIN
By Louise Everett

I stand alone against the twilight sky
And press the wind which lightly rushes by.
For I have seen the Indians dance
And feel the color of the very ferns.

All day, in blazing sun that sears the plain,
All day in scorching dust, to sacred song
And reverent beat of tom tom,
Swift and strong.

So I love the star above our mountain peak,
I love the coming dark. Oh great ways
Of nature! Lo, I lift my hands in praise.

Quick to the north I turn to see the flash
Of lightning, hear the thunder feel the lash
Of tempest wind invoked by their dance-prayer;
I note the thirsty fields and garden here.

Beside the river low with drought;
I see
That mountain, mesa, valley, shrub and tree
Turn hopefully as I do toward the cloud.

With joy I stand and raise my song aloud,
With thanks for the last of arid, stifling days.
I feel the rain and lift my arms in praise.

Each new factory that is built ruins in part the value of some other factory already built. The extension of factory space and buildings has been carried to such an extent in some lines of industry that none of the properties are able to make any money and for this reason are undesirable investments.

The author would regulate investments and in this way production, and the wastefulness of competition, which spends its last energy fighting competition instead of directing its talents to the production of better goods.

The remedy for the immediate crisis he says is inflation. Money is only a commodity like all other commodities, and as such it should be managed. The proper authorities should increase the amount of money when prices are too low and they should restrict the amount of money and increase the supply of goods when prices are too high.

Make the wisest use of your materials, wealth and man power and you may raise the standard of living 30 or 40 per cent in a generation; on the other hand permit each individual to raise as much money as he chooses to use your economic machinery blindly, produce in unrestricted quantities, distribute blindly, speculate, boom, give vent to every instinct of rank individualism inflamed by mass excitement, and you can lower the standard of living by even a greater degree as we are now proving to ourselves.

THE TINMAN

The tinman cried, "Watch, everyone, and you are bound to see some fun. The magic oil that Duncy's spreading soon will take effect. "It's bound to make my tin man walk and maybe he will also talk. In fact he might do lots of things that you have not expected. "Well, gee," said Duncy, "I'm tired out. I've spread this strange oil all about. Perhaps somebody else had better try it for a while. "Of course I've used up lots and lots, but possibly I've missed some spots. "Here, let me try my luck at it," cried Duncy, with a smile. He poured a bit in every groove. The tin man then began to move. "Hey, look at him," cried Duncy. "He's bending over! Now he's straight. I'm so excited I can't wait to see what's going to happen. Right around him let's all stay. "And then the tin man bent real low. "Look out," cried Duncy, "or he'll go right over on the ground and spoil his funny oilcan face. "I guess his joints are rather stiff. It ought to make them looser if I help him." Then he pushed the tin man right back into place. A squeaky voice said, "Thank you, lad. My, what an awful time I've had just making all my new joints work. Somebody help me walk. "Huray," cried Duncy. "He's all right. I'm glad I worked with all my might to bring the old tin man to life. Just listen. He can talk!" "You bet I can," the tin man cried. And then he walked to Duncy's side and said, "So you're the lad who poured the magic oil on me. "To show my thanks to you I'll try." And then he lifted Duncy high and kissed him on the cheek. It was a funny sight to see. (Copyright, 1932, NEA Service, Inc.) (The tin man carried the Tinsles over the stream in the next story.)

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for October 9.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.

Editor of The Congregationalist.

The life of two homes is presented to us in the study of this lesson the home of Jesus in Nazareth, where he grew up with his parents, and the home of Martha and Mary and their brother, Lazarus, which was to be in a sense the home of the Master in trying periods of his later life. The two passages emphasize two aspects of home life, and one of them particularly some of the problems of home life.

The reference to the childhood of Jesus is very brief, but it is effective and revealing. "Jesus grew and waxed strong, filled with wisdom, and the grace of God was upon him." What could give a more wonderful story of a great childhood than these simple words? And if we believe with any reality in the earthly life of Jesus, and that his divinity was a divinity manifested in a life that was truly human, we must understand what could only have been the nature of the home life and parentage of Jesus.

We have, in the portion presented for our lesson, one phase of this home life in the story of the pilgrimage to Jerusalem. The parents of Jesus were devout. They had brought him up in the wholesome atmosphere of response to the high and true things in their religion. So it was that in this later childhood of Jesus, when he was gradually appreciating the meaning of things, the record is that "Jesus advanced in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and men." That also is a remarkable description of a boy of 12.

In the glimpses that we have into the home in Bethany, where Martha and Mary lived, we enter into the realm of home problems. The home is not simply a happy and desirable place, where everything arranges itself. It is a place where there are very definite duties involving labors and relationships. It is a place where neglect and inefficiency are very serious, and it is a place in which ideals are tested.

We must not today judge Mary and Martha by the paucity of the record. We must avoid taking the part of Mary, who seemed to be visiting with relatives in this city and other southern points. They visited here with Miss Adelaide Proctor and Mrs. S. W. Andrews, 283 North Orange street, and with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Proctor Jr. and baby son, Alfred, also of this city. They are making the trip by automobile, stopping en route home at Bryce canyon and Zion National park.

ORANGE PERSONALS

ORANGE, Oct. 8.—Mrs. Robert E. Groves and Mrs. Elmer Guldridge North Harwood street, spent Friday in Bloomington with Mrs. Emma Squire, a former Orange resident. Mrs. Guldridge is reported as greatly improved following an operation which she underwent several weeks ago at St. Joseph's hospital.

Women of the First Baptist church held an all day sewing meeting Thursday in the church, meeting in the morning to repair used garments which had been contributed to the society and to make new articles as well. These are to be used in home missionary work. Following a covered dish luncheon at noon, Mrs. H. F. Sheerer conducted the Sunday school lesson for this coming Sunday. ## NOW FOR FOOTBALL

With the disastrous rout of the Chicago Cubs by the New York Yankees in the International World Series, baseball went into the discard for six months, and football came in to take its place in the public interest. For the next three months we shall hear of what Notre Dame, Stanford, California, Harvard, Yale, Ohio State, Wisconsin, and many others are doing on the gridiron. Baseball is a professional game, while football is still theoretically an amateur sport. Still, if the report of the Carnegie Foundation and the grapevine gossip that one hears from time to time is true, there are a good many young fellows playing football on college teams who are indirectly receiving some remuneration for bringing fame and glory to old Alma Mater.

It is not easy to see how a young fellow can become an expert at football as many of them do become without suffering some in their academic achievements. This, we know, is very vigorously denied; yet we have the word of one young collegiate, now in his junior year, who says that he has cut out football for the rest of his college course in order that he may give the necessary time to his studies. In spite of it all, football will have a very conspicuous place in the interests of millions of sport lovers for the next few months. We shall see thousands of young fellows hastening to get their Sunday morning paper, passing by the political news, the foreign news, or the developments of the latest scandal being aired in court, to get at the sporting section to see what "our" college team has done the day before to "our" dearest rival.

Such is life, and we presume we shall have to accept it as it is. The glamor of football is great, and few young fellows with the necessary equipment to play a successful game can resist its charm. Yet, we contend that a college is primarily intended to be an educational institution, and only very incidentally one to furnish sport for the alumni and the populace in general.

SCRAPHEAP FIGURES BELIEVE BELIEFS

The Bureau of the Census at Washington has made a report on employment which is interesting because it presents facts out of harmony with a widespread impression. The belief is that men, forty and over, are consigned to the scrapheap in great numbers because of the very rapid tempo of modern industry.

A footnote of the report states: "The percentages shown in the table indicate that the age of forty may not be, as is often stated, the 'dead line' for men entering new occupations, since the proportion gainfully occupied in 1930 was almost as high for men forty to forty-four years (97.6 per cent) as for men 35 to 39 years (97.7)."

The bulletin points out that for men between forty-five and forty-nine the ratio of gainful workers is 97.2 per cent, only five-tenths per cent less than for men ten years younger. For men between fifty and fifty-four the ratio of employment is 95.7 per cent, a decline of only 1.8 per cent from the ratio of men fifteen years younger.

An interesting further fact is presented in the figures that in 1920 of all men between forty-five and sixty-five there were at work 93.8. In 1930 it was 93 per cent. The differences are about 100,000 persons. Some of this difference is probably accounted for by a rising standard of well-being which causes some people to retire at an earlier age.

Sympathy was, early in the depression, felt keenly for men past the flush of youth has widened to extend to the youth who seem to be more in danger of demoralization because of unemployment than the older man.

The change for the better in this condition will not be perceptible when it first appears and afterward, when figures are compiled, we may learn that it never was as bad as we felt it to be. Hearts are so sympathetic with young people trying to get started in these times that the cases with which one has personal contact and which command the sympathies weigh heavily with us.

CALIFORNIA FOCAL POINT IN NATIONAL ELECTION

It is entirely possible that the national campaign will turn, as it did in 1916, on the electoral vote from California. Candidate Roosevelt has visited the state; Ogden Mills, Secretary of the Treasury, has been speaking in the state, and it may be possible that President Hoover himself will make a trip to the Pacific Coast, and add the personal prestige and appeal of his personality to winning California.

Undoubtedly one phase of it, which is unquestionably troubling the leaders, and concerning all who desire to see Mr. Hoover elected, is the position of the independent candidate for the United States Senate, Robert P. Shuler. Mr. Shuler came into the campaign primarily as a protest against losing his radio license. That he has a tremendous following was evidenced in the primaries. This vote is personal and not partisan.

We have an idea that it might be easily possible, partially speaking, for a profitable trade to be effected. Certainly the open espousal of Mr. Hoover's cause by Mr. Shuler would help amazingly just now.

MORE JOBS FOR COOLIDGE

Ex-president Coolidge remarks: "Whenever there is a job open, somebody wants me to take it." He is being mentioned as a possible successor to Darwin P. Kingsley, chairman of the board of the New York Life Insurance company. Mr. Kingsley has just died.

Mr. Coolidge does not know the experience of being a member of the unemployed. He should not at all become impatient at the proffers of positions. While he does not need them, he should be thankful that they are there. It is an illustration of the truth of: "Unto him that hath shall be given," and the other part of it seems to be equally as true: "but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath."

Senator Reed Smoot predicts that the next Congress will pass the sales tax. But first they will pass the various appropriation bills to make the tax necessary to balance the budget.

BRUTALITY IN FLORIDA PRISON

The news of the brutal treatment of a convict in Florida, which resulted in his death, is depressing. But one can have the satisfaction of knowing that it is being aired; that the heartless perpetrators of the brutality are likely to be punished, and the treatment of Florida prisoners, which harks of the spirit of the Dark Ages, will be changed.

It is difficult to understand the beastial inhumanity that is evidenced by the recital of these horrors.

The Next Picnic
The San Diego Union

One of these days the legend of the buyers' strike will be replaced by the reality of a buyers' panic.

No normally intelligent human would be rash enough to predict the day or the hour, yet that reality is inevitable. The only alternative to prevent it would be the complete and final collapse of a world-wide industrial civilization—a possible catastrophe, but one which is quite as unlikely as a collision between the earth and Mars.

Economists—not merely the politicians—are now picking out here and there the indices that appear to point toward recovery. We have better reasons than we have had for three years past for believing that the famous turn of the corner is in process. If so, the very next panic will be the buyers' panic.

The buyers in question will not be swarms of householders besieging the department stores. The buying will not be in response to any printed appeal. It will result from a suspicion on the part of thousands of scattered business executives to the effect that it is time to begin replenishing stocks.

When that suspicion first takes hold it will start the endless chain of action—a chain exactly similar to the one that led downward into the slump.

The first general wave of purchasing will affect commodity prices, and the first general upturn of commodity prices will stimulate—in fact, compel—further buying.

When buying really begins, it will be lashed onward by a necessity as absolute as that which inspires any panic of liquidation. The rush to the bargain counter can be—and will be—as frenzied as a run on a bank.

Co-operative Oaks—and Acorns
Christian Science Monitor

"No job too big, no job too small." This well-worn slogan is finding a new application in these days of increased cooperation. The size of these cooperative organizations which come in for most publicity indicates a widespread confidence that their method can solve basic problems of stupendous proportions. But the fact that this same method may be applied with success to smaller-scale difficulties gets less attention.

Nation's Business, however, reports that in Gary, Ind., the quandary in which the white-collared home owner without a job finds himself has been made a target of cooperative attack. Not by a vast financial organization in which the interests of an entire nation are involved, but by a regular home-town, neighborly get-together. Gary has set up its own "reconstruction corporation" to help hard-pressed home owners. A mortgage bureau has handled more than 1000 cases in which home owners faced the loss of their equities. In most instances friendly readjustments between borrowers and lenders have been made.

No job too big, no job too small—that is one of the selling points of this cooperative idea. Between nations, between sections of society or just between neighbors, it works with the same degree of efficacy. Nor does the existence of large-scale endeavor along this line preclude the operation of less imposing efforts. Rather each attempt to alleviate distress aids all others, and each sows the seed of a further attempt. It is encouraging to know that no job is too big, but it is important to remember that no job is too small—for cooperation.

A THEORY OF MIGRATION
My neighbors of the maple trees,
Who surly south each year
Before the ponds begin to freeze
And leaves turn dull and sere,
Find little time to sit and sing;
They flit about all day
That they may gain the strength of wing
To bear them on their way.

But even when, through falling snow,
The leafless woods loom dim,
The solemn, melancholy crowd
Sits glooming on a limb,
And while more bitter grow the days,
From house, asthmatic throats,
The blue and white appalled yaws
Still sound their strident notes.

It may be that they cannot find
The lofty aerial trails
By which the others leave behind
The biting winter gales.
The biting winter gales.
It may be that they cannot bear
Too far afield to roam;
But I believe they do not care
For any place but home.

As for the timid, restless flocks,
Which yearly southward soar
When icy-fingered winter knocks
Upon the forest door—
They really have no need to go,
But they are vain, like man,
And make these dreary trips to show
Their neighbors that they CAN.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

THE MAN AFRAID

When the history of this phase of depression has been written, I venture the prediction that the historian of insight will set down its spiritual effects as even more important than its economic effects.

"The reason why unemployment is such a terrible thing," Whiting Williams has wisely said, "is not simply that it prevents men from putting money in their pockets. It prevents men from having any possibility of believing that they are at all important in the whole scheme of things."

We shall not know for years what subtle demoralization unemployment has brought to the spiritual fiber of the victims of this phase of economic dislocation.

But it is not alone the man unemployed who feels the spiritual impact of depression. It will be years before we know the spiritual effect of this depression upon millions of Americans who have never lost their jobs but have lived in continual fear of losing them.

In The Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science for March, 1931, Mr. Williams reports this comment made to him by a carpenter.

"Well," the carpenter said, "I've been lucky enough to have steady work at my job for the past six months, in spite of the fact that hundreds of my friends in the building trades haven't had any jobs at all.

"But I swear to you that there hasn't been an hour out of the past six months when I've seen the boss start in my direction but what I've said to myself, 'There it comes; this is the last. I'll be laid off today.'"

I haven't arrived home once in these last six months even so little as ten minutes ahead of time without having my wife catch sight of me as I turned the corner, and out at the gate she was by the time I got there, with a catch in her breath sayin', 'Has it come? Are you laid off, Jack? Are we through with this good luck?'

It is the millions of men afraid, men like this carpenter, who haunt my mind as I undertake to estimate the spiritual effect of this depression upon the moral fiber of the nation.

This is why the management of industry finds its greatest challenge in the problem of laying off the specter of insecurity that has until now haunted our industrial system.

A SMILE IN THE DAY

There has to be a smile in the day, even in the principal's office. A smileless day is a catastrophe, not to be borne. And the funniest thing about it is that right in the midst of the smile there is always the feeling that this cannot be borne. It is awful. Dreadful. Goodness me. And all the time you are laughing.

The other day I was standing in the office door with the children went by to their classroom from swimming in the pool. I noticed that one little lad looked queer. He wasn't striding along, chatting. He wasn't looking anything or anybody. He seemed rather uncomfortable. I beckoned him into the office, a big sunny room, with lots of comfortable chairs and big tables where people come to talk and rest.

"What's the trouble?" "I'm all wet. I didn't hear the teacher whistle so I was late in getting out of the pool. I hurried and my underwear fell in. I had to put it on and it's wet. It's all right. I'll dry all right."

"No. That's won't do. You can't sit in wet underwear all afternoon. Come in here. Now you take off that wet suit and put on my overcoat and we'll hang the wet things on the radiator to dry."

I turned to my work and the next thing I knew there was a delegation of visitors, important-looking gentlemen from abroad. They had come to take a look at an American school. I welcomed them and started them off on their tour of inspection. All the time Dominick was drying off in the washroom, hidden from sight. I never thought of company going in there. But that was where I had reckoned without the company. "Please, may I wash my hands? I could not resist putting my hands into the clay in the pottery shop and now I want to touch the lovely rugs in the weaving room. I must wash these," and he held up a pair of muddy hands.

There was nothing to do but open the door and usher him in. There sat Dominick reading his book, munching his almonds, all wound round with my overcoat. The wash was spread out to dry on the wash basin, the radiator and the window sills.

"Gott in Himmel what 'st' stammered the astonished visitor. "It is little boy drying his clothes." "Id L." "He let his shorts fall into the pool and we had to dry him out."

Something about it struck us all as too funny for words and we burst into laughter. At first Dominick was inclined to be shy about it but even he could not help laughing. The kindly professor patted him in his damp head and said, "Never mind, never mind. So long as you dry out without chilliness you are all right. Lucky little goose to be born in America."

ALLIES IN BIG DRIVE

On October 8, 1918, American, British and French forces shattered 20 miles of the Hindenburg defense system between Cambrai and St. Quentin, advancing to an average depth of three miles and taking thousands of prisoners.

The Americans too Brancourt and Premont, and in the Verdun region, continued the fight for the remainder of the Argonne forest. Franco-American forces advanced two miles on a seven-mile front east of the Meuse.

President Wilson replied to Germany's request for a peace parley and armistice, asking if his terms were fully accepted and if Chancellor Maximilian spoke for the people. The president also called for evacuation of invaded territory before recognizing a plea for an armistice.
